Aleksanyan M.

Regional Administration in the Republic of Armenia

Yerevan. “Miva-Press”, 2000 - 164 pages.

For the first time, the book (monograph) covers the substantiating principles of organization and operation of territorial administration, stipulated in the Constitution of the Republic of Armenia.

The author analyzes the major modern trends of territorial administration, highlights the relationship between bodies of regional and local self-governance, emphasizing the specifics of the constitutional status of Yerevan.

The book is designed for individuals dealing with territorial and local administration. It can serve as a textbook for graduate students and professors of legal and economic institutions. The book is also meant for the delegates of the National Assembly, employees of public administration of RA, as well as community leaders and members of the Council of Elders.
